

Journalism/Creative Writing Extended Project Poetry Track

Step Nineteen:
Final Draft

Now that you've had a peer go through your work extensively, it's time to make sure your piece is completely refined and polished for your final draft. You'll have four class days to go through and make your piece perfect. After those four days, you'll have two days in class to spend just reading others' works. You've all worked so hard on these pieces I want to make sure you get a chance to have others read your wonderful work!

So, go through the peer edits and revisions. Make any of your own changes that you'd like to. Complete your final draft. Remember, when it's all said and done, your final piece should be at least ten to fifteen pages. You're welcome to have it be longer if you'd wish.